

CAROL WALL
ACTIVIST, ADVOCATE, LEADER

Legacies of Labour and Community Activism ORGANIZE. EDUCATE. LIBERATE.

Carol Wall, a true leader in union activism and an advocate for equity, fairness, and justice, fearlessly broke barriers to become a voice for the unheard and for emerging union leaders. Carol became the first Director of Human Rights for the Energy and Paperworkers Union of Canada. She was a member facilitator for the Coalition of Black Trade Unionists, a Vice-President of the Canadian Labour of Congress, a national negotiator for the Public Service Alliance of Canada, and a member of the Women's Committee of the Ontario Federation of Labour. Carol's resilience and determination serve as a beacon, inspiring us to persist in the ongoing fight for equity and justice with education. Her most recent work was with CUPE Women in Leadership Development (WILD), a program for Black, racialized, and Indigenous women, to create radical change to address systemic racism.
